Research Proposal Guideline

1. Research topic should be clearly spelt out in the proposal to formulate research objectives and questions. The proposal must be specific and clear in terms of its objectives and research questions. For this, the following questions should be addressed:
  - a. What would you like to investigate in your research?
  - b. Why would you like to conduct this research?
  - c. How will the findings of the research be used or useful?
2. An extensive review of the relevant literatures will be required and a critical review of what has been written on the issue should be included in the proposal. The review of the literature should help determine the methodology of the research, avoid duplication (of research), and add value to the society/community and academia.
3. Research questions or hypotheses should be clearly stated in the proposal.
4. The research process begins the moment one chooses a topic. Research method(s) is used to answer the research questions. Please state the procedures and techniques that you will use to collect the data. In addition, you need to focus on the data analysis process, analytical framework and ethical considerations as the research will focus on human issues. In the proposal, you also need to justify the research design you choose.
5. The proposal must include a schedule (timetable) and a detailed budget. Every expense in the budget must be justified on a separate sheet.
6. Some of the above questions may be readdressed for experimental research such as clinical studies. However, the research proposal must be clear in formulating objectives and research questions or hypotheses. Furthermore, the proposal should clearly define its expected output.
